The Fall Fair.

The Red Deer Exhibition Association held its Fall Show on Thursday last, 10th of October. The day was all that could be desired, but a very slim crowd turned out to take part in the proceedings. Owing to the farmers being busy, it was not thought there would be a big crowd present, but had it not been for the school children and their friends the whole show would have been a dismal failure.

The summer fair was a grand success, and it emphasizes the fact that one good show for Red Deer, and that in July, is enough for this district at the present time.

The exhibit of roots and grasses were never better, and the grain and dairy exhibits were good. George Domoney had samples of Red Fife and Preston Spring wheat and Banner oats, grown this year, which were splendid samples of grain and showed conclusively that there were some fields of grain in this district which entirely escaped the frost. There was only one other sample of 1907 grain, and that was barley. While it was free from frost, it was not a very creditable exhibit, as it apparently just came from the thrasher. The exhibit of grasses was the finest ever seen in the town. A. P. Olsen, for the past season, has collected with infinite care over seventy varieties of native grasses and legumes, ranging in length from 3 inches to 6 feet 4 inches. Mr. Olsen will probably preserve the exhibit for the Dominion Exhibition at Calgary next year. Mr. Ward showed some splendid samples of alfalfa, and Mr. G. D. Bryan seven varieties of wheat, four of oats and two of barley in the straw, free from frost, which were greatly admired. Mrs. Honore Meeres took a number of prizes for preserved fruits and pickles, and Mrs. Kirk lead in bread. Mr. Pearson's potatoes were grand. G. W. Smith, Bryan and Bennett also having fine exhibits. A. P. Olsen's selection of vegetables were generally admired by all, and were a most creditable exhibit.

Mr. McLean, Principal of the Public School, made a field day of sports for the benefit of the scholars of the school and numerous prizes were donated by the citizens of the town. The different events were carried out by Mr. McLean, assisted by R. E. Waller and L. M. Gaetz. The following carried off prizes:

THE BYE-ELECTIONS.

The writs for the three bye-elections in London, East Northumberland and North Wellington, to the House of Commons have been issued. Nominations will be held October 17 and polling Oct. 24th. Since Confederation North Wellington has returned a Liberal seven out of the ten elections held. East Northumberland has returned a Conservative eleven out of the thirteen elections and London has returned Conservatives five times out of the ten elections held since Confederation.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION AT LACOMBE.

The Lacombe teacher's convention met in the school at Lacombe on Oct. 3rd and 4th. About 75 teachers were in attendance, some from the Camrose branch and some from the Lacombe branch, as well as those from Ponoka and Leduc. The subject of the convention was "The Teacher's Work." Mr. Miller, of the normal school, read a very complete and instructive paper on "Nature Study in the Rural School." This was a treat to the assembled teachers, the subject being handled excellently. The other subjects on the program were interestingly treated by the teachers of the district. The committee voted to meet in Ponoka next year.

THE NEW NATIONAL POLICY

1. Honest appropriation and expenditure of public money in the public interests.

2. Appointment of public officials under considerations of capacity and personal character and not of party service alone.

3. More effective provisions to punish bribery and fraud at elections, to ensure thorough publicity as to expenditure by political organizations, to prevent the accumulation of campaign funds for corrupt purposes and to prohibit contributions thereto by corporations, contractors and promoters, to expedite the hearing of election petitions and prevent conclusive arrangements for the withdrawal or compromise thereof, to provide for a thorough investigation of corrupt practices and if necessary to appoint an independent prosecuting officer charged with that duty, to simplify the procedure thereto and to enforce the law as amended.

4. A thorough and complete reformation of the laws relating to the Civil Service so that future appointments shall be made by an independent commission acting upon the report of examiners after competitive examination.

5. Such reform in the mode of selecting members of the Senate as will make that chamber a more useful and legislative body.

6. A more careful selection of the source from which immigration shall be sought, a more rigid inspection of immigrants and the abolition of the bonus system except under very special circumstances and for the purpose of obtaining particularly desirable class of settlers.

7. The management and development of the public domain (in which are to be included great national franchises) for the public benefit and under such conditions that a reasonable portion of the increment of value arising therefrom shall inure to the people.

8. The operation and management of our government railways by an independent commission free from partisan control or interference.

9. The development and improvement of our national waterways, the equipment of our national ports, the improvement of transportation facilities and consequent reduction of freight rates between the place of production and the market whether at home or abroad and the establishment of a thorough system of cold storage.

10. The reorganization of the present railway commission as a public utilities commission with wider power and more extended jurisdiction so as to establish thorough and effective control over all corporations owning or operating public utilities or invested with franchises of a natural character.

11. The establishment after due investigation of a system of nation telegraphs and telephones under conditions which shall be just to capital already invested in those enterprises.

12. The improvement of existing postal facilities especially in newly developed portions of the country and the inauguration after proper inquiry as to the cost of a system of free rural mail delivery.

13. A fiscal policy which will promote the production within Canada of all useful articles and commodities that can be advantageously produced or manufactured from or by means of our natural resources having due regard to the interests of the consumer as well as to the just claim of our wage earning population.

14. The promotion of negotiation, legislation and other constitutional means of a system of mutual preferential trade within the Empire.

15. The restoration of the public lands to the province of Alberta and Saskatchewan upon fair terms.

16. The unimpaired maintenance of all powers of self government which have been conferred upon the provinces of Canada under the constitution.

AN UNPROTESTED CHECK.

By Edith M. Doane.

Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

When all the legal formalities were ended and the fortune that had been Gordon Maxwell's was finally handed over to his "beloved daughter Elizabeth," that young lady regarded her new found responsibilities in dismay and promptly proceeded to shift them to other and broader shoulders. James Gordon had been her father's secretary and his shoulders were presumably better fitted for the burden.

"But you cannot hand me over your fortune to carry, as if it were a book or a parcel," said Gordon distractedly, though inexpressibly cheered by this profession of confidence. "You do not understand."

"Oh, yes, I do," returned Miss Maxwell serenely. "I understand perfectly. I shall appoint you."

"Chairman of the finance committee," suggested Gordon.

"Well," said Miss Maxwell. "I will be the committee."

"Yes, I shall do my best," said Gordon, laughing. "But the committee will please remember that it has certain active duties."

"I don't see why it should have any," she retorted. "Practically, you have already managed the estate for the past five years. You were invaluable to father."

"Perhaps I was," Gordon returned, "though I don't remember it, and he never mentioned it. However, I appreciate your confidence and will serve you faithfully; but (gravely) what if I should make mistakes? Is it wise to intrust the handling of so much money to one man?"

"I should think it might depend a good deal upon the man," said Miss Maxwell stately.

So Gordon fitted up an office in a downtown skyscraper, where he sat at a table strewn with papers and a tape, legal looking documents, digesting and writing late into the night, and Miss Maxwell, having arranged her financial affairs to her liking, dictated a meek, elderly relative as chaperon and turned her attention to other duties.

Her first, chiefest and most immediate difficulty was her cousin Tom Cornish.

"It isn't that I do not like you," she put patently explained for the hundredth time. "You know I do. As a sister, no, I—"

"Oh, drop it!" retorted Tom inelegantly. "And anyhow I shall never marry."

"So it's all up?"

"I think I have been telling you that for the past five minutes," said Miss Maxwell impatiently.

"You know what I meant all along," he said sullenly. "Some one has been giving you a resume of my vices."

"Your vices are nothing to me nor your virtues either. If you—"

"The words died on his lips. For the first time in all their lives his arm closed around her. Convulsively he held her to him, bending his head till his lips met her soft brown hair.

"Betty, I've got to tell you—I'm in no end of trouble. I need you—I need your help—"

By Betty's vehement effort Betty released herself.

"How dare you? How dare you?" she raged, then to a dead stop. Her eyes grew wide with dismay as she fixed upon the doorway at the end of the room.

"Mr. Gordon," she said in a constrained voice.

It was Gordon indeed. He was quiet at the other end of the long room, but not so quiet as the tableau could be unseemly by him, and the distress of her face was intensified in his as he bowed hurriedly and the yellow porters fell behind him.

Betty blushed furiously. A person looking on, or not understanding him, of course—she turned hastily to Tom, who stood staring at her unawakened.

"Now go!" she cried desperately. "Go!"

Meanwhile Gordon had found his hat and the sidewalk and walked blindly down the avenue, forgetting the papers he had gone for—forgetting everything except a girl's flushed, dismayed face.

It was scandalous that she should be allowed to drift into complications with that fellow. It was all very well for Cornish was her cousin, but what of the fellow's character—a gambler, a fortune hunter? Yet what could he do? All day he had been thinking of seeing Betty. Well, he had seen her. And she must have been in earnest. She wasn't the kind of girl to let a man—and as memory gripped him he plunged gloomily on.

It was several days later that Miss Maxwell, blue gowned and demure, turned into the entrance of a bank on lower Broadway and walked calmly to the paying teller's window.

"I suppose you know that this overdraft account," Miss Maxwell said, said gentleman, handing out a packet of fresh bank notes.

The girl stared at him in astonishment. "No, I did not know. I had no thought," she said nervously. "That last check was rather large—$10,000."

"Ten thousand?" repeated Betty weakly.

"Yes. We did not question it of course, because Mr. Gordon so often draws large amounts." He looked at her keenly. "It was all right, I suppose."

"Yes, oh, yes, said Betty unsteadily. "It was all right. I—I suppose Mr. Gordon cashed it."

"He sent a messenger, as he usually does."

Betty nodded. The bank avam and for an instant her brain reeled as she turned away, perplexed and vaguely conscious of impending evil.

Ten thousand dollars!—

Even to Betty's vague business reasoning $10,000 seemed a good deal to lose track of. But there must be some good reason why Gordon had filed in the check for so much, for Miss Maxwell's methods of dealing with the management of the estate had not changed, and, though she still signed all her checks, she serenely washed her hands of further responsibility, and Gordon usually fitted them in. Once at home she hurried to her desk. She had a prejudice against keeping her check book in order; and an appalling number of hastily scribbled checks confronted her. She looked at them, covering a pad with figures and counting up totals on her fingers. But was no work, and near the end of one stub stood out from the rest provocatively.

It was blank.

She rubbed her elbows on the desk and, resting her chin in her hands, stared hard into space. There was the check unaccounted for, and he had filled it out for $10,000. No one knew how many others he had used. He was welcome to the money. She would not fight it if she could. But he had seemed to differ, and she had trusted him. Slowly her head sank on the desk, and the heiress of the Maxwell millions cried her eyes out like any ordinary lover.

It was ten hours later—ten dreary, interminable hours—that the clock on Betty's dressing table chimed 1.

Betty awoke. No sleep had come to her eyes. Getting out of bed, she slipped into a dressing gown. She had the devil on her back. She was late than lying in bed open eyed and sleepless moaning over James Gordon.

Her book was in the library. She opened her door and looked down into the hall below. Pushing open the library door very gently, she entered the room, then uttered a faint scream.

The room was lighted by the faint rays of a balcony lantern.

Standing at her desk with his back to her, opening her check book, was—Tom Cornish.

Starting convulsively at sound of her cry, he turned and looked at her white to the lips. "Betty," he stammered.

Miss Maxwell stood very still.

"Why did you do that?"

But Tom had fallen into a chair and hidden his shame in his hands.

"It's all up," he said hoarsely. "I'm dead broke, and I thought I stood a chance to shake myself once more. I've had the devil on my back lately, and I got every cent of that other check."

Betty looked at him as if in a dream.

"The check—your check. I was dead broke—difficult everywhere—and I got hold of your check book. I knew Gordon did about as he pleased—and it was your signature all right."

But to his mystification Betty was looking at him with wide eyes. "It was you who cashed the check for ten thousand," she repeated softly. "It was you—it was you."

It was weeks before she told Gordon, and he, being a wise young man in his generation, said no word of her bygone injustice.

PRACTICAL HINTS.

As to the Small Boy's Clothes—Dainty Cottons.

In making clothes for a small boy (business is the thing to be avoided) simplicity is the height of good form for the little man who wears the blue suit. It is upon material, cut and finish that his clothes depend for their effect. Even from the time his first short dress is donned, the tailor made effect should be apparent.

A good scheme is to procure a suit from a thoroughly up to date children's outfitter and take copy it carefully at home.

Oster, Hammond and Nanton wrote regarding two lots offered town. They reported having referred the question to Mr. Loft, Calgary. Filed.

EXECUTIVE AND FINANCE.

Councillor Stephenson brought up the report of the Executive and Finance Committee recommending payment of the following accounts: Ilsey Bros., $31.67; W. G. Sawyer, $3.00; J. Bremner, $29.05; Leonard, $25.85; W. McLeod, $6.30; G. Rothnie, $2.50; H. H. Gaetz, $230.00; J. McIntosh, $21.25; J. Hocking, $6c; F. W. Galbraith, $25.25.

Your committee recommend the voting of the ratepayers on the four by-laws hereby presented.

The report was adopted.

SEWERAGE.

Councillor Gaetz brought up the report of the sewerage committee as follows:

Your committee on sewerage begs to report that a conference was held between the representatives of the Council and the Provincial Board of Health at the council chamber on this (Monday) evening of Tuesday, 8th of Oct. when the whole question of the disposal of the sewerage of the town was given carefully into with a view of securing the consent of the Board to the temporary disposal of the sewerage into the river without purification and to the ultimate disposal of the same.

There were also present at the conference representatives of those who have been raising objections to the disposal of the sewerage at the present outlet. Your committee reports that following the suggestions of the Board of Health, negotiations in progress that we believe will result in a satisfactory solution of the difficulties confronting us. It is hoped that at the next council meeting your committee will be able to lay before you definite recommendations in regard to the matter.

The report was adopted.

The report on the appointment of commissioners was discussed and town solicitor Greene addressed the council thereon. The report was carried over to next meeting.

A by-law to provide for the raising of $3,400 for further expenditure for sewerage construction etc., was introduced by Councillor Gaetz and carried through its first and second readings.

A by-law to provide for the raising of $9,000 for meeting certain expenditure for war work was introduced by Councillor Stephenson and read a first and second time.

Councillor McKee introduced and carried through a by-law to raise the sum of $500 for gravelling and grading certain streets.

Councillor Botterill introduced and carried through a by-law to raise the sum of $2,300 for the purpose of completing the construction of the fire hall and installing a heating system therein.

Councillor Gaetz moved, seconded by Councillor McKee that the secretary treasurer be struted and hereby authorized to have the several by-laws which have been read a second time, published, and all necessary steps taken to submit the same to the vote of the electors thereon. Carried.

Some discussion took place on the milk by-law.

Councillor Botterill said he hoped Councillor Tallman would him for opposing the by-law and throwing obstacles in the way of its final passing. He wished to set himself right. He had no desire whatever to buck the by-law. The members of the council had joked to some extent but that was because the council really couldn't make up its mind as to what it really wanted. He desired to state that he had no idea whatever of reflecting on Councillor Tallman or doing him an injustice in any way.

Councillor Tallman said it always seemed to him that objections were made to the by-law and it was laid over so often, he did not feel like bringing it in again. It was not his place to do so anyway.

The Mayor said it was a misunderstanding, no doubt, and he thought the by-law could now be brought in and dealt with.

Councillor McKee was tired asking those who put on the roof to repair the leaks. He would see the work done some how soon.

Council adjourned.

The Church Census.

In the house to house visitation under the auspices of the Sunday School association which is to be taken by the representatives of the evangelical Churches on Tuesday, Oct. 22nd, the following questions will be asked at each house:

Name? Residence? Number of persons included in family? Number under eighteen years of age?

Number attending church at least once a month? Number attending Sunday School regularly? Church preference?

No preference. Refused information. Not at home. Vacant house.

Is this the record of family? Servant? Roomers? What language is used at home.

BETTER THIS YEAR THAN EVER.

Any person who has read the Family Herald and Weekly Star for a few years back would wonder how it could be improved from year to year. Still every one will admit that during the past twelve months there has been a wonderful improvement and the Family Herald and Weekly Star is to day bigger value than ever before. Newspaper, Magazine and Agricultural Journal all combined, it is certainly a unique publication any person who does not know the Family Herald and Weekly Star should give it a trial for 1908. It is a wonderful dollar's worth.
